Musician / Educator / Recording Artist

- Learn how to teach blues music and its history to grades K-6, make blues instruments and discover the wonders of tension and vibration.
  - Did you know that blues music grew out of church / spiritual music and work songs, and that popular folk songs such as "I've Been Working On The Railroad" and "Pick A Bale Of Cotton" are really true stories about the arduous lives of laborers, railroad workers and field workers? Adults sang these songs to organize their efforts and make their work go faster and easier. You can do that too!
  - The blues had a baby and they named it Rock 'n' Roll!
- * Participants must commit to at least one auditorium presentation in a MFMI affiliated school, upon completion of the workshop. Participants must have good speaking skills, be comfortable speaking to large groups and have a good sense of rhythm. The ability to play a musical instrument is preferred, but not required.

With over 50 years of performing experience workshop presenter, Hawkeye Herman, initiated his award-winning "Blues In The Schools" program, 40 years ago.

Sponsored by:

Organized by: Music For Minors II (MFMI), the non-profit keeping music alive in the schools since 1988.
